Giddens' Modernity and Self Identity - in 14 bullet points ...

Modernity differs from all preceding forms of social order because of its dynamism, its deep undercutting of traditional habits and customs, and its global impact. It also radically alters the general nature of daily life and the most personal aspects of human activity. In fact, one of the most distinctive features of modernity is the increasing interconnection between globalizing influences ...

The reflexive project of the self, the author seeks to show, is a form of control or mastery which parallels the overall orientation of modern institutions towards 'colonising the future'. Yet it also helps promote tendencies which place that orientation radically in question - and which provide the substance of a new political agenda for late modernity.

Modernity and self-identity : self and society in the late ...

The new mechanisms of self-identity shape and are shaped by the institutions of modernity and Sociology is a fundamental part of the institutional reflexivity of modernity. There is a basic dialectic between modern institutions which encourage the repression of 'living out' existential questions in day to day life and the emergence of life-politics which seeks to manifest them.

Modernity and Self-Identity: Self and Society in the Late ...

Self-identification becomes a reflexive project of each individual in modernity, whereas in pre-modern settings self-identity was largely given, as opposed to made. Individuals create and reform their identities through choice, and due to the reflexive nature of modern self-identification, everyday decisions and behaviour become more relevant
