Governing Masculinities in the Early Modern Period ...

In the Early Modern period (1600–1800), there was a virtual explosion of female-authored publications. Women scholars, poets, and public speakers argued that they were following the example of biblical women like Deborah. Deborah was evidence that a woman could judge, rule, study, and speak publicly. Rivkah bat Meir, a Jewish writer from Prague, used Deborah's story to advocate for women ...
